Road Trips for the First Time RVer. by Jamie Cattnach. Planning your first-ever RV trip might fall short of, say, welcoming your first born or getting married, but it's a pretty darn exciting time. You're about to take on the wide-open road, zipping off anywhere the wind might be calling, all with your very own private villa (and favorite people) in tow.

The first miles passed easily along wide, suburban boulevards with courteous drivers and a nearly deserted toll road. And then we merged onto one of Southern California's notorious freeways. The most difficult kind of traffic for an RV driver — especially a new one — is what I call fast-and-busy traffic.
