About the Exams - Association of Social Work Boards - ASWB

The social work licensing exams are all pass/fail exams developed to measure minimum competence in social work practice. In any pass/fail exam, there is a "pass point," the number of questions a candidate must answer correctly in order to pass the exam. All jurisdictions that use the ASWB exams recognize the same pass point. This pass point varies, depending on the category of exam you're taking and which version ("form") of the exam you get.
